Dear Alpenflow Epic Riders,

I greatly look forward to riding with you what I believe is the most epic trial you can find in Australia. Together with Graham I rode and marked the trails yesterday. We used Shimano bunting that you will find at every intersection. In addition there are EPIC trail signs and you can also download the GPX file from the website: <https://rockytrailentertainment.com/alpenflow/alpenflow-epic-marathon/>

All up it should be very easy to find. Along the trail there are plenty of little creeks we can refill our bottles at, but please bring plenty of food. This ride is not to be underestimated and including the climb back to Buller we didn't get much change out of 8 hours.

We will be a select group of about a dozen riders. Can you please let me know if you have a pickup organised from Mirimbah or if you intend to do the final climb back to the top.

Blue Dirt do offer a shuttle service at 12.30pm as well as 4pm but they need to be booked in advance. I do believe that the 12.30pm shuttle can be reached in time but only if you don't take too many breaks.

We will see if we decide to ride as one group or split up into two. You can of course dash ahead and do the ride as quickly as you like by just following the signs.

We plan to have a food stop at the Telegraph Pole Junction (unfortunately the cafe there is currently closed but we will organise snacks and drinks to be delivered out there).

The weather forecast is near perfect but it can always get cold in the Alps so best to bring a wind jacket just in case.

Overall the tracks are in great shape. Please take extra care on the descents. All fire roads are open to traffic so there could be the odd 4WD on there. Also some of the trails are popular with horse riders so please give them right of way if you come across any.

If you have any questions just shoot me an email.

We will go through it all again in detail on Saturday morning before the ride.

See you in Buller!

Martin
